Cointancy strives to provide its users with the highest level of information regarding the protection of personal data. Committed to compliance with the GDPR, we take a proactive approach that is communicated through documentation that is accessible and understandable to all.

In this context, we provide you with our policy on the use of cookies.

1 - What is a cookie?

A "cookie" is a term that defines a set of tools or features that read and store information on your device (computer, smartphone, tablet). This information is stored in the form of text files.

These cookies record specific information about your preferences, your browsing, and the various interactions you have on the Cointancy website. A cookie alone cannot identify you by name.

2 - Why do we use cookies?

The vast majority of cookies stored during your browsing are intended to facilitate and optimize your user experience so that you have access to all of our services.

At the time of writing this policy, we group cookies placed on coinstancy.com into two main categories. First, you will find cookies that are essential for providing the service you are accessing (technical cookies). These are strictly necessary cookies that enable us to ensure the proper functioning of the site, the proper execution of the services requested, and the retention of your consent over time.

However, other cookies are placed independently of our control with the integration of visual content hosted by third parties. These are intended to obtain information for the purpose of implementing performance measures. In this context, the issuance and use of cookies by third parties is subject to a data protection policy separate from that of Coinstancy.

3 - Cookie settings

When you browse and interact with the coinstancy.com website, we ask you to express your choice using our information banner, which is displayed when you first visit the site on your device.

The choice you make is not final. You can change your mind later by giving or withdrawing your consent to the use of cookies via the "Cookies" link at the bottom of our website.

Depending on the browser used when browsing the Coinstancy website, the settings may differ, as a result of features that allow certain categories of cookies to be automatically rejected. If you wish, you can manually delete the information stored on your device.

We must also inform you that rejecting certain cookies may cause malfunctions during your future visits, or in some cases, their automatic deletion depending on your browser's default settings.

4 - Protection of personal data

The use of certain cookies may involve the processing of personal data. To find out about your rights and our approach in this area, please read our data protection policy now.

5 - Policy updates

Coinstancy may modify its cookie policy over time following the integration of new technical architectures or partners.

We invite you to consult it regularly to stay informed of the latest version, as well as our personal data protection policy.
